Tempo di Marcia

Till ready

We'll soon be leaving to sail o'er the sea;
Our Uncle Sam-my was in a bad fix

There's no use griev-ing it just has to be;
 Back in the dark days of sev-en-ty-six,

While we're fight-ing we are right-ing wrongs they've Now's our chance to show to France we've not for - done to you and me and Lib-er-ty And as we go march-ing got that lit-tle debt for La-fay-et-te, For he came a long way

gai-ly a-long— We'll be sing-ing this song:
 to help us out,— That's why we're glad to shout:

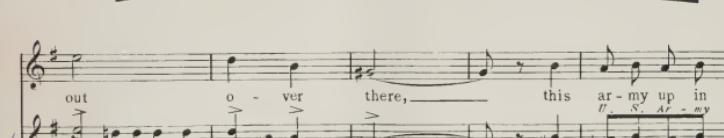

CHORUS

Look out over there, — We will soon be

Sad is ev'ry day,
Skies are dark and gray,
Since you left me very lonely here;
All the while I long,
To greet love's golden song,
To fold you in my arms, to have you near.

Far though we're apart,
In my waiting heart,
Dreams of you arise like light divine:
And I know at last,
When the night is past,
Love will come again and make you mine!

Chorus

I'll pray for you, and you must pray for me,
Now you are far away beyond the sea,
Your prayer: that love may strong and true remain,
My prayer: that God may bring you back again!

The Boston Music Company, Boston, Mass.

The sheet music is framed in a red border. It features three staves of musical notation. The top staff is labeled "Chorus Andante sostenuto". The lyrics "I'll pray for you and you must pray for me, Now you are far away beyond the sea, Your prayer: that love may strong and true remain, My prayer: that God may bring you back again!" are written below the notes. The middle staff has lyrics "way be-yond the sea, Your prayer: that love may strong and true re-main," with dynamics "poco a poco cresc." and "poco cresc.". The bottom staff has lyrics "My prayer: that God may bring you back again!" with dynamics "molto poco cresc." and "a tempo (tempo primo)". The music includes various dynamics like piano, forte, and sforzando, as well as performance instructions like "riten." and "riten. riten.". The publisher's information "B.M.C. 1858 Copyright, 1911, by The Boston Music Co." is printed at the bottom of the page.
